Explanation:
The exhibit shows that all the computers on the network are being 'pinged'. This indicates that the ping request was sent to the network broadcast address. We can also see that all the replies were received by one (probably with a spoofed address) host on the network. This is typical of a smurf attack.

A smurf attack is a type of network security breach in which a network connected to the Internet is swamped with replies to ICMP echo (PING) requests. A smurf attacker sends PING requests to an Internet broadcast address. These are special addresses that broadcast all received messages to the hosts connected to the subnet. Each broadcast address can support up to 255 hosts, so a single PING request can be multiplied 255 times. The return address of the request itself is spoofed to be the address of the attacker's victim. All the hosts receiving the PING request reply to this victim's address instead of the real sender's address. A single attacker sending hundreds or thousands of these PING messages per second can fill the victim's T-1 (or even T-3) line with ping replies, bring the entire Internet service to its knees.
Smurfing falls under the general category of Denial of Service attacks -- security attacks that don't try to steal information, but instead attempt to disable a computer or network.

NEW QUESTION: 2
Refer to the exhibit.

The network administrator is troubleshooting the flow that is circled in the exhibit. The administrator accesses the CLI for the HP Provision switch with these flows. How can the administrator determine whether the switch has established a service insertion tunnel ID 100664146 to the controller?
A. View tunnel interfaces.
B. View service policies.
C. View OpenFlow controllers.
D. View Open Flow flows.
Answer: A
