Answer: B,D

Explanation:

C: The saviour of having to type in the username and password each and every time that you start a server. A very useful little file to have, particularly if you have multiple managed servers.

By default, this appears in the Admin Servers security directory ($DOMAIN_HOME/servers/AdminServer/security) when a domain is created in development mode and is called boot.properties. The file is only created for the admin server, not for any additional servers; simply copying the security directory over is enough. The password is encrypted for the domain, so it can only be used for servers within that domain. In production mode, the boot.properties file doesn't exist.

D: Development mode enables a WebLogic Server instance to automatically deploy and update applications that are in the domain_name/autodeploy directory (where domain_name is the name of a WebLogic Server domain). Production mode disables the auto-deployment feature and prevents any applications you place in the autodeploy directory after you switch to production mode from being deployed.

Note:

- *By default, a WebLogic Server domain runs in development mode.
- *You can run a WebLogic Server domain in two different modes: development and production. Only development mode allows you use the auto-deployment feature

NEW QUESTION: 2

MBIA, Inc., a municipal bond insuring company, has a bond issue that is selling for $80.05 to yield 9.5%.

The bond has a coupon rate of 7%, with semiannual payments, and matures in 2025.If interest rates in the economy increase, which of the following statements will be true, all else equal?

- I. the nominal yield of the bond will increase.
 - II. the yield-to-maturity of the bond will increase.
 - III. the current yield of the bond will increase.
- A. I, II, and III
B. I and II only
C. I only
D. II and III only

Answer: D

Explanation:

Only statements II and III are true. If interest rates in the economy increase, both the bond's yield-to-maturity and its current yield will increase. The bond's yield-to-maturity will increase to reflect current market rates on similar risk investments, and this, in turn, causes the price of the bond to fall. The current yield of the bond is the interest payment divided by the bond price. Since the interest payment does not change with interest, the current yield will increase with the decrease in the bond price. The nominal yield of the bond is the same as its coupon rate, or what it yields when it sells at its par value, and does not change with changes in interest rates in the economy.
